rested, but now it looks as though he was about to squeel, and lot he has plenty of friends-three lawyers and a host of bondsenen. We have not seen the bottom of this matter yet."

Mr. Royall then paid his respects to Mr. Percival, Mr. Cityde W. Saunders's foreman, who had acted as registern at Mr. Saunders's request. Then sketching the character of Beveridge, Mr. Royall cried:

the character of Beverlage, Mr. Royall cried;

"Ought those men who appointed such officers to be your Electoral Board? I pause for a reply."

"No, no, no!" screamed the crowd. The speaker then took up the answer made on Friday by the Electoral Board. He characterized it as flimsy and as being unworthy of a school boy.

"Cohen and Ebel say they did not know about the bad character of the election officers. Dr. Carrington and Epps say they did, for they had told them, Judge between them as you please, For my part I believe Carrington and Epps, for everything point in that direction." (Applause.)

Mr. Royall then named two benefits that Mr. Samuel Cohen had received from the City Council, namely, the light franchise and the right to build over the alley back of his store, near First and Broad Streets.

chise and the right of banks of his store, near First and Broad Streets.

In speaking of Mr. Ebel's axe to grind, Mr. Royall said Ebel had been unknown until 1990, when he suddenly became prominent in politics; was elected to the City Council, and later was nominated as president of the Council by Mr. William Gibson and elected.

"It was significant," said the speaker, "that Mr. Gibson was made chairman of the Committee on Streets and placed on the Committee on Streets and placed on the Committee on Streets and placed on the Committee on Grounds and Buildings, while Sol Bloomberg was made chairman of two committees. Where was Mr. James Caskle placed? He had been turned out of the presidency. He was a high man, who had the confidence of the people. Where was he placed? He was chairman of no committee and on two unimportant ones."

(Cries of "Tell us more Buck, You've got 'em fixed.")

"I tell you, fellow-citizens, you put a thousand men in the penitentiary, but you will have done nothing until you remove the electoral board.

"I've heard that some people say: 'Don't pay any attention to Royall; he's a lunatic.'

"I've heard that others say: 'Even if ha is a lunatic, he is what I want if he can relieve the situation.'

"Some of the rascally gang say: 'Royall will ruin himself.' I tell you I will ruin himself.' I tell you I will ruin him if they don't watch out. I tell you I am no lunatic, but I am desperately and earnestly trying to improve the frightful conditions of politics in this city, and I am going to succeed, so help me God, if you will stand by me."

(Applause and cries of "We will.")

Mr. Royall here explained that after he had begun his fight some prominent gentlemen had offered him a fee to prosecute election frauds, and that he had been henored by being employed.

"If the rascals heat us now its good-bye Johnny Roach, for victory will be taken as a license to steal and plunder."

Mr. Royall next read an affidavit signed by Mr. Lucas, which told of the meetings hield by J. C. Smith at the jad, when election officers met him there with their books. Continuing he said:

"I don't believe if the election had been fairly conducted that J. C. Smith would have been nominated. I don't believe he was nominated."

After telling the story of how Cyrcle paid the poll taxes on the last day before the books closed, Mr. Royall said:
"Now, I ask you, are you going to stand this state of affairs? If you are, then the erime rests with you. I for one am against it."

The Gleenius vesselvilles was the last.

SAM STERN TAKES A HAND

Don't Care About Stealing, But Wants Good Government.

After the Royalt mass meeting ba adjourned and the modern Martin Luther had retired to the shades of his own chateau, the idle crowd that lingered in the square began to cry "Sam Stern!" "Sam Stern!" "Speech! Speech!"

"Sam Stern!" "Speech! Speech!"
Ever mindful of his country's call, the hero of the carnival of bygone years, pressed eagerly towards the stand. His mansard root was adorned by a light-gray "lid" of the "Nelly Bly" variety and a tie of vivid interest protected his linen from the vulgar gaze.

Removing his "Nelly" and showing his teeth like President Roosevelt in a "delighted" smile, the ex-mnyor of Jeffersen Ward gave vent to the following patriotic sentlement:

Ward gave vent to the following patriotic sentiment:

"I don't care how much they steal. I want better government."

Sad to relate, this burst of eloquence met with but a doubtful reception, for cries of "Sit down" and "Back to Russia" greeted the disdain of theft and the desire, for civic, improvement.

Amid a perfect storm of hoots and yells, Samuel continued his remarks, accompanied by varied and appropriate gestures.

The crowd couldn't hear what was said, but it disapproved nevertheless, and it looked like hot times, with the rough end for Stern when, like Patrick Henry, he raised his musical voice above the malevolent cries of his audience and said:
"If you will listen one minute, I will say good-night." say good-night.

A large majority of the crowd condemned the speaker, but he had some friends in the party, and at times conversation reached a heated pitch. Finally the argument settled down upon the broad shoulders of H. M. Allport and the narrower shoulders of the diminutive R. Lee Syrele.

Mr. Allport was vehement in support of what Mr. Royall had said in his speech about the general crooked ness that he alleged existed here, while Mr. Syrele contended that no crookedness had been proven.

FIVE BAD WOUNDS

To-morrow's Docket - Mrs. Smith's Appeal to Come Before Judge Clopton.

Manchester Bureau, Times-Dispatch, No. 1102 Hull Street.

A cutting affray occurred in Manchester last night, when Tddle White, colored, was slashed in five different places by another unknown negro, who as soon as his work was accomplished escaped in the darkness. The fraces occurred over a girl named Daisy Flemming, to whom both men were paying attention, at the entrance to J. R. Holloday's place, in Giff's Hail, which is run especially for colored people. Daisy was engaged in conversation with the would-be murderer when White, who, upon her own confession, is her choice between the two, approached her and asked her why she was talking to him. She made no reply and went up into the hall. White then made his way to the other man, who, without a moment's warning, turned on him and stabbed him live times, inflicting as many deep and ugly wounds. The negro immediately turned, when the surrounding people were hardly aware of girl named Daisy Flemming, to whom surrounding people were hardly aware of what had happened, and fied up the street. Folloeman Waymack was standing on the opposite corner, and as soon as he saw what had occurred, ran to the hall, but the negro had escaped. In a few moments Sergeant Wright appearation the scape of the scape of the standard by the scape of the scap ed on the scene, and the two officers at once began a search for the fugitive. White, in a half fainting condition, was carried by his fr ends to Harrison's drug store, 1603 Hull street. At length Dr. Vaughan, colored, arrived on the scene vaugnan, colored, arrived on the facels and dressed the wounds. By that fine White had been undressed and his wounds dressed by his friends. He had lost a quantity of blood, and was in a semi-conscious condition. It took the main conscious condition. It took the main strength of two colored men to hold him while Dr. Vaughan dressed and sewed the wounds. The man frequently screamed aloud n his pain, and it was all the three men could do to keep him down during the operation of the physician.

There were five separate wounds, a cut on top of the head, one just below the left temple, one across the left thumb, which was nearly severed, one in the small of the back, and another about half way down the left side. The last way down the left side. The last was the worst, being an inch and a half long and an inch deep.

Five minutes after the affair happened fully two hundred people had gathered on the scene, and if the would be slayer lad been caught he would have fared badly at the hands of the enraged crowd.

To-morrow's Docket.

The criminal docket for to-morrow will be one of the heaviest on record, and Judge Clopton will find his hands full in disentangling the various cases that will come up for a hearing. The most notable will be that of Mrs. Shepherd K. Smith, who lies in the county jail convicted of the manslaughter of her fiveyear-old son, Ralph. Judge Clopton will

Other cases to be tried are: Ernest Farmer, third offense of petit larceny; Rose Sutton, shooting to kill Sergeant Wright and Policoman Moore; Henry Jones, alias Johnson, colored, grand larceny; Willis Young and George Hicks, colored, cutting, Young and George Hicks, colored, cutting

Young and George Hicks, colored, cutting, and G. W. Gooding, non-support. Mr. Ernest Wells is counsel in all these cases. The following is a list of cases to go before the grand jury: C. Beckner, alias John Wilson, and Vance Harris, highway robbery, attempting to rob George Tinsley (colored): George Morris, criminal assault; John Spencer (colored), cutting Walter Windsor, clubbing John Spencer; George Minns (colored), betrayst; Arthur Smith, non-support, and D. B. Palne, peddling without a license.

Of these the probably most important is that of George Morris, charged with criminal assault on a thirteen-year-old girl. Aside from the criminal docket is a long list of civil cases.
